BIA Toolkit: Virtual Events Promotion

A step-by-step guide

This project by the Riverside BIA was made possible thanks to the BIA Innovation Fund of the City of Toronto. Riverside

3. MARKETING & PROMOTION

Promotional campaign

To promote and advertise your virtual event, use a mix of paid and non-paid digital media channels to drive people to your registration page:

- Organic Social media posts on Facebook and Instagram
- Paid Social media ads on Facebook and Instagram: use a combination of videos and carousels
- Google Ads: create targeted ads and ad groups
- Free event listings on different online media outlets
- Word of mouth: tag BIA members, friends, elected officials, associations, and influencers. And ask them to share the event on their social media profiles

Timeline for promotion: you need to start advertising at least three weeks before the virtual event date.

Thinking about KPIs...

Other than the event Key Performance Indicators (KPIs) and metrics (see Main Toolkit: Virtual Event Planning), you can consider keeping track of:

- 1- The engagement level on your social media posts (comments, shares, and likes)
- 2- The impressions, CTR (click through rates), and number of clicks of your paidmedia such as the social media Ads and Google Ads
- 3- The percentage of leads through Event Ticketing Channels (e.g. Eventbrite) versus the BIA's direct traffic and channels.
